AT DUTY'S CALL

Policeman Charles Evans

Fatally Shot in Attempting to Arrest John Johnson.

The Negro Wounded by the Dying Officer.

Policeman Horace Lane's Close Call.

City Policemen Evans and Lane had an encounter with a bad negro on Saturday night which cost Evans his life, and out of which Lane came unhurt by the merest chance. Saturday evening city Policemen Horace Lane and Charles Evans were notified that a bad negro, John Johnson, was raising a disturbance in that abominable bad locality known as Deep Bottom, and went down to arrest him. Johnson is an ex-convict, having served two terms already in the pen. He is a son of the negro whom Henry Watson killed some years since. The policemen had little fear of any trouble and had made no thought his wound was necessarily fatal. When it was known that Evans was dead it was with the utmost difficulty that the more conservative element among our people prevailed on the angry friends of the dead man to give the law an opportunity to deal with the villainous negro who had done so much devilry. Judge Cooper, however, called a special term of Court for June 28, in order to give this and the Whittaker case speedy trials, and the hot-headed ones were quieted down.

The dead officer was one of the most quiet of men. An honest, upright, sober and discreet officer, who did his duty fearlessly but quietly and gentlemanly under the most trying circumstances. He was everywhere recognized as one of the best and most efficient men on the force and had the respect of all classes. His death is a real loss to the community. He had been married to his second wife only about ten days. She is a second time a widow by the hand of violence. Her first husband, Jude Langston, was killed some five years ago in this city by Sam Everett, and now a second time she is called to stand at the bier of a husband ruthlessly snatched away from her side by bloody hands. Mr. Evans had a large family of children, several of whom are small and needed the father's care and help he could give them. Great pity them, and pity a community where such deeds of violence are permitted to go unpunished.

BRUTALLY MURDERED.

Newton Anderson Killed

By Henry Whittaker Near Johnson Station.

An Inexcusable and Cowardly Murder.

Henry Whittaker, who lives near Johnson's Station in Meade county, walked up to Jailer Chenault about 11 o'clock on Saturday night, saying he wanted to surrender himself as he had killed a man. Mr. Chenault was not first disposed to credit his story, but when the fellow pulled from his pocket a pistol with which he said the deed was done, the Jailer knew he had at least a concealed weapon case against him, so put him inside the bars. Whittaker's statement, which is given without a shadow of regret, is that he heard a young man, 18 years of age, Newton Anderson, had threatened to kill him on sight. Anderson and Whittaker had previously had some angry words, over some testimony given in court by the former

A Midnight Shooting.
On Friday night about eleven o'clock people who live in the section of town east of Mayesville and north of Main streets were startled by a couple of reports seemingly from a gun or pistol of large calibre. It seems that Henry Watson, Counselman from the third ward had gone to Settles Bros' livery stable and left his horse and buggy. He started in the direction of home and when he reached the mouth of Wilson Alley only a few steps away, the shots were heard. A crowd soon gathered at the scene and Watson explained he had been fired on by some party or parties who were in the alley the guns being so near his face that the flash from them blinded him. Parties, and there are several of them, whose word is unimpeachable, say the direction of the flashes were upward and the guns were pointed in the air. Parties who were near did not hear any one running down the alley as Watson says he did. It may have been some half drunken fool trying to perpetrate a very poor practical joke or it may be possible, as some assert, that the negro Johnson, who shot policeman Evans on Saturday night, may have attempted to carry into effect a threat he is said to have made to kill Watson, who some five years since killed Johnson's father.

Taxes Returned.
At a meeting of the City Council Thursday night an ordinance was passed directing the City Clerk to issue vouchers to the several banks of the City to return to them the taxes paid under protest for the years 1893 and 1894. This was done in accordance with the decision of the Court of Appeals in the bank cases. Under the decision of the Court, the Hermet Law holds good, being, as contended by the banks, in the nature of a contract which the framers of the New Constitution could not annul. It was ordered there to be paid back to the Traders Deposit Bank—$795.91, to the Mt. Sterling National Bank—$1692.75, to the Exchange Bank of Kentucky—$148.49.

preparations for it, but before they were aware of what the negro would do, he fired full at Lane, the ball striking fair upon his policeman's badge, which was pinned just over his heart. The badge was bent into a cup shape almost and Lane was knocked down by the force of the blow. Evans drew his pistol, but by this time the negro turned on him, both firing about the same time. Evans was shot in the lower part of the abdomen and the negro in the left breast, the ball striking a rib and ranging upward, but penetrating the lung and lodging in the shoulder. Evans fell, but fired again, striking Johnson in the thigh, bringing him to the ground. The ball was cut from Johnson's shoulder and he was removed to the jail. Evans was carried to his home, where it was soon ascertained his wound was a fatal one. Mr. Evans lived till 12:30 o'clock Sunday, when death relieved him of further suffering.

There is small doubt the negro Johnson would have been treated before he could have been removed to the jail but for the fact that it was by the law of the land. Oh, for a legal hanging or two! Such an object lesson would have a better effect on the unduly numerous such than a dozen men dangling at ropes' ends from the trestle.

Mr. Evans' funeral will take place from the Christian church this morning at 10 o'clock. Services conducted by Elder H. D. Clark and Rev. C. J. Nugent. He will be buried by the Old Fellows of which order he was a member.

Jesse Blair, a brother of Tom Blair, who was lynched at this place, New Year's morning, was shot on Saturday near his home in Morgan county, at mouth of Pleasant Run, by Hensley Dyer, a son of Thomas Dyer, of the same neighborhood. Blair was shot twice, once in the breast and again in the shoulder. He will probably recover. The particulars of the origin of the difficulty are not at present obtainable.

Mr. A. J. Hardin and Miss Mattie Quisenberry, of this county, were married at the Methodist parsonage, Rev. C. J. Nugent officiating.

He says he met Anderson in the road near Johnson's Station on Saturday evening, about 6:30 o'clock. He asked Anderson if he had threatened to kill him. Anderson said it was true. Whittaker pulled his pistol before Anderson could in any way defend himself, shot him once in the abdomen, once in the left breast and as he whirled and fell on his back, shot him three times in the back. Later reports from other sources say that the two men had been working together during the day, and that the murder was even less excusable than made out by Whittaker. It is said the parties had been friendly all day and that Whittaker walked off and waited for Anderson till he came up to him, then asking him—according to a statement the latter lived long enough to give—'He would say to his face what he had said to his back. Upon an answer that he would, Whittaker commenced firing. The wounded man lived till Sunday morning.

A Villain Felled.

On Monday morning about four o'clock Miss Lila Turley, the 18 year old daughter of Mr. Joseph Turley, of this city, was awakened by some one in her room. Looking up she was horrified to see a burly negro sitting on the side of her bed pulling the bed covers from off her. Grasping the cover she drew it over her head and ordered the negro to leave. He, a second time pulled the cover from her, at the same time pointing a pistol at her head telling her to keep still or he would kill her. Instead of obeying she screamed at the top of her voice for her father. Mr. Turley sprang from his bed in a lower room, and the negro hearing him jumped from the window on to a shed roof, down a ladder, up which he had climbed, and escaped. It was light enough for the young lady to see the features of the scoundrel and she will recognize him if seen again. Every effort is being made to find the villain. Already one arrest has been made, and it is proved to be the man wanted there will be use for the trestle again.

Miss Turley is a daughter of Mr. Joseph Turley, a prominent fire stock dealer of this city, and a beautiful young woman, whose gentleness and ladylike bearing on all occasions, has won for her the many friends her true worth merits.

The villain who attempts such a heinous outrage, whether he succeeds or not, is unfit to live, and the sooner the world is rid of his presence the better for it.

Sunday afternoon in front of the colored church at Athens Pink Wilson shot and killed Arch Wilson. Both parties are colored and lived at Ineztown, a negro settlement between Chillicothe and Athens.

THE ADVOCATE.

A Novel Duel.

On the Island of Jamaica there was a meeting between a Scotch captain and a noted creole duelist, named Henri d'Evville. The captain had gone ashore and was dining at a hotel in Kingston, whereas, as not infrequently happened, the company indulged rather more freely in drinks than was wise in those quarrelsome days. All went well until Captain Stewart was requested by d'Evville to sing a song in Gaelic. Now, although Scotchman, Stewart claimed that he knew no Gaelic, but the creole being persistent rather than give offense the captain sang "Auld Lang Syne," and supposed that compromise was satisfactory. [The company broke up and Captain Stewart returned to the ship accompanied by a friend. On their way back the friend mentioned d'Evville's reputation as a bully and expressed his opinion that he deliberately sought a quarrel for the purpose of engaging the captain in a duel. Captain Stewart then said:

"There is no more horrible practice of our time. Once and only once have I fought a duel. That was when I was a young man, and for the sake of a lady for whom had my dearest friend and I were authors. I killed him. Since I saw him lying dead at my feet I have not known a happy day. I thought to myself that I should take up my life for an offense more trivial than that for which I took the life of my friend."

Arrived at the ship the captain stood leaning against the bulwarks watching the lights fade out as dawn came over the town, when he saw a small boat coming toward his vessel, which was lying at anchor. As it drew near, he recognized an officer in the Colombian service, a friend of d'Evville. He boarded the vessel and going up to Captain Stewart said he had come from d'Evville with a challenge for the insult of substituting an English song for Gaelic and thus attempting to make him a laughing stock for those of the company who knew better. Stewart turned to his friend and said:

"My forebodings were right after all."

He tried, however to explain to d'Evville's messenger that no offense had been intended and to point out the absurdity of a duel for such a cause and at last flatly refused to accept the challenge. A few days later Captain Stewart met d'Evville and as might have been foreseen was instantly assailed as "coward" and what was worse was struck across the face with a horsewhip. This was more than the Scotchman could stand so he sent the message d'Evville so much desired and at the time appointed took two of his sailors with him to the rendezvous. The men carried a pickaxe and a spade.

Stewart ordered them to dig a grave sufficiently deep to receive two bodies and to d'Evville's astonishment insisted that they should both stand in this grave, holding a pistol in one hand and in the other the diagonal corners of a handkerchief, which stretched out would regulate the distance. The creole thus cornered, had no choice but to accept the conditions. The two men stepped down into the grave, and Captain Stewart firmly grasped the handkerchief, saying, "The world will be well rid of a scoundrel, and also of a miserable man." The seconds drew lots for the word of command. Meanwhile d'Evville fumbled with his corner of the handkerchief, dropped it and picked it up again. His face was as white as the piece of linen, and before the word "Fire" had passed the lips of the men whose duty it was to give it, he fell forward in a dead faint.

Captain Stewart looked down on him for a moment, then, with a look of disgust, kicked him, scrambled out of the grave and made his way back to the ship—Brooklyn Eagle.

In Arizona, Wyoming and other Rocky Mountain districts there are immense quantities of petrified wood. This, when dressed and polished makes a most pleasant substitute for marble and onyx, wherever these are used for ornamental purposes. The demand for this material has become so extensive that several factories have been established, where it is cut and polished and made into mantels, tables, etc. The great variety in colors and grains, together with the high polish which it takes, makes it an excellent substitute for more expensive materials. It will probably become quite an important industry when well introduced.

ANNUAL ADDRESS

OF THE PRESIDENT

Of the Woman's Missionary Society

Of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

MISS BELLE H. BENNETT.

Your after year, we come to these Annual Meetings, sit together for a few days in happy Christian intercourse, and go back to our homes, better or worse, for the opportunity that has been given us.

In making, what is by courtesy, usually called the "Annual Address," I have heretofore come before you with a brief record of the year's work—a short recital of the plans, methods and achievements of the Society since its organization, or asked you to lift up your eyes and look, for a moment, on the fields so long white to the harvest in the "regions beyond." To-night, I ask you, to consider, briefly, with me, what profit there is to us, in coming to these Annual Meetings. What ought we to get from them? We come up to the honor, our various occupations and duties, some through trials and difficulties, perhaps bearing heavy burdens—not for recreation or entertainment, though we may and do get both—but as delegates to a Missionary Meeting. Women, selected and chosen, as representatives of the great missionary principle which was Divinely manifested in the Incarnation of the Son of God.

Christ came into the world, to redeem the world, to save man from sin. His words were, "I will that all men shall be saved." "I, if he lifted up, will draw all men to me." "Even as the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you." Although an Hebrew to the Hebrews, and so far as the record shows, going but twice during His public ministry, outside the confines of His native Palestine; yet, His was no narrow mission. He did not come to save one people or nation—and that that final closing hour, His earthly career finished, He stood in the midst of His disciples having put on His glorified body, "surely, never man spake as this man." "All power is given unto me, Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature, and lo, I am with you always." We call this now, "the great commission"—the "vital commandment"—and you, I say, men and women, are supposed to have in us the spirit and the mind of this Christ. A burning and consuming desire for the salvation of the whole world. Is this true? Every Christian must have in her, some measure of the missionary spirit, else how can she be of Christ? But the indifference, the ignorance, the disobedience of the church concerning the great and vital question of the evangelization of the world is a constant wound and reproach to us. Look at the history of our own organization. A church with a membership of one million four hundred thousand—one million of whom are women and girls. Among us, a well organized, well equipped Woman's Missionary Society—requiring only ten cents per month as a membership fee and asking for a meeting of one hour each month, to be spent in prayer, praise and study of the work. Yet, in the seventeen years of its existence, only about thirty-seven thousand women, who teach and train the same number of young people and children, have been enrolled as members. In our own Kentucky Conference, with the names of twenty thousand women and girls on our church records—fewer than three thousand are enlisted in the work. And this is but a repetition of the history of the missionary cause in all denominations, except, perhaps, the Moravian. We know, too, that this "little remnant" is the working laity of the Church, "the power that makes for righteousness"—and how often we comfort ourselves with the precious words, "Fear not, little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." But ought we not to make these Annual Meetings a time for self-examination? When we shall ask ourselves the question, "Am I in no way responsible for the appalling ignorance and blindness of the Church?" "Have I the true missionary spirit, the love of Christ and humanity that constrains me to commend it to others?" "Do I believe that God has power to save the whole world from sin?" "Am I a liberal, intelligent faith, through which the Holy Spirit can work to the conversion of others?" "Have I consecrated myself to Christ and His service, or have I given myself to some particular branch of church work, because it is most agreeable to me, and doing this, refuse to lift up my eyes to any other field, or open my ears to the cries from any other mission?" Am I ready, at any moment, to obey the Divine Will, to say like Paul, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" or am I ready to protest with Peter, "not so Lord, this thing is unclean or common." Let us turn, for a moment, the "search light" of a few very practical questions upon our hearts.

We pray, earnestly, fervently, and perhaps with great faith, that God's kingdom may come and His will be done, in India, China, Africa and the islands of the sea. We gladly give our ten cents per month, a little of our time and something of our love to those far off lands, without knowing, or trying to know much about them. Now and then, we even remember God's ancient people and pray, according to the commandment, for the peace of Jerusalem—but are there any among us, who even occasionally speak to the Jews in our own business houses and under our streets, of Him whom we believe to be the Messiah? Do we invite them to our Churches, our Prayer Meetings or Missionary Societies, and try to show them something of "Jesus and His love"? Again, do we, as we come in daily contact with the negro servants who serve in our kitchens, drive our carriages, wait in our parlors, tell the good tidings and bear witness to the saving power of the Gospel to them? "Do we long to see them have a deep and rich experience of the things of God and become mighty in the Scriptures so that they may have the power to witness for Christ?" God put those people into our midst, and every dark face that looks up into ours, and every brown hand lifted to us, is a cry from Ethiopia, calling for light. Do not let us deceive ourselves by saying that we are longing and praying for the redemption of the Dark Continent. If we neglect this offering of that heathen land, living in our very homes. We may not go to Africa, but Africa has come to us. One more—do we turn our eyes to these fair and beautiful mountains of our own State, and looking down through the long range of the Alleghenies in Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia and North Carolina, realize that there are in them, more than a million ignorant, degraded, and Christless people? Are we in no way responsible for the one hundred years of neglect from which these people have suffered? Is there no obligation upon us to that? The crack of the rifle or the report of the revolver, followed by the glaring headline account of the newspaper correspondent, of another assassination or the outbreak of another mountain feud, "what but the natural sequence of the vicious 'shoot 'em' lives of the ignorant mountaineers—but to us and me, my sisters, it is the voice of the Almighty God, saying, "Thy brother's blood cries to thee from the ground." Around us, on every side, in our cities, our little towns, and our country neighborhoods are the uncovered, the godless, the wayward and the baseless. Do we go to them while sending to others? It is written, "Ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem and all Judea and in Samaria and unto the uttermost part of the earth." We may answer, there are thousands of people in our churches who say they believe in Home Missions—surely, they will do these things. While in these foreign lands there are vast provinces, whole countries that have not a single missionary nor a ray of Gospel light in them, our all is needed there. This excuse will no longer suffice for us. The Command was "Go ye and we must obey it. It requires but little of personal sacrifice or self denial for most of us to meet our obligations to the Missionary Society and send some one else to foreign lands—but to go in person, to our brother, our sister, or our neighbor, and tell him that we know God and know that he loves us and saves us from sin, requires a close communion with Christ, a baptism of that power which he alone can give, and is the service through which our characters are purified and developed, and by which we become more and more like Him whom to know aright, is eternal life. If we make these meetings times of earnest, honest self-examination, times of humble and entire consecration, then they will be indeed, what they ought to be, and what they always are, to many of us—seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord." Here, our information of the work and all things concerning it ought to be greatly enlarged, our zeal quickened, our faith and courage established. Here, we ought to get the baptism of power, the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, God's promise, "ye shall be witnesses to me." "Tarry ye here until ye be endued with power from on high." Doing this, these meetings shall be to us a veritable standing upon the Mount of Transfiguration, and in looking upon the ineffable light that streams from the face of the Christ, we will be enabled to go back down into the valleys of service and in the midst of indifference, discouragements, sicknesses, poverty and vice, carry the "Joy of the Lord" in our hearts and in every unattained place—no matter how disgraced by ignorance, error or debauchery—see the image and superscription of the Creator, and work, even with fasting and tears for the redemption of that soul. The dark places of the earth will be lighted up to us, and the great love filling our hearts and lives will go out alike, to the hardened sinner of our own land and the barbarous savage of the African jungle. With divinely reinforced strength we will go back to our churches, cast out the demons of ignorance, indifference and disobedience. Our local Societies will be built up, our numbers increased, the tithe paid, the thank offering made with gladness and the reproach of "have ye robbed us, with the Lord," shall be wiped out. The Church will put on a new garment of righteousness and no intelligent man or woman will dare to stand and say, "do not believe in foreign missions." For they shall know that the Gospel is the power of God unto the salvation of everyone that believeth, to men of every race and clime.

Electric Locomotive Superior to Steam.

Comparing the electric with the steam locomotive as mechanism, pure and simple, there is a wide difference between them as regards simplicity. On the one hand we have an aggregation consisting of boilers, pumps, cylinders, valves, piston and connecting rods, with reciprocating motions, while on the other hand, the electric locomotive has but a single moving part, the armature, having a rotary motion of the axle. The cost of repairs for a simple mechanism like the electric locomotive would be far below that of the steam locomotive, in proof of which we need only take the statement of Mr. Alexander Siemens president of the English Institute of Electrical Engineers, that the electric locomotive operating in the London Underground Railroad ran 90,000 miles without costing a cent for repairs. All railroads will be eventually operated electrically. "The first changes from steam will probably be made, and have in fact already begun on short suburban roads where the traffic is heavy and the trains are run at frequent intervals, and thus approximate more closely to the ideal conditions of the economical electric railway. These electric spurs will then be gradually extended until in the near future the entire line will be adapted to the new order of affairs, and a new generation of railroad officers, less wedded to the older methods will have come into existence. So far as new, light railways are concerned, such as those contemplated in England at the present time, and which are rapidly increasing in the United States, electricity presents advantages which all railroads will be eventually operated electrically. It has been suggested that such agricultural roads might largely increase their income by supplying electric power for farming operations in the districts through which they pass. Some trolley roads do this now."—Scribner Magazine.

SLANG DICTIONARY.

If You Are Mixed Refer to the Following Definitions and Examples.

The following extracts are given from a "Slang Dictionary" running in the New York Recorder:

DOUGIL—Money. Syn., "long green," "frog skin," "coof."

"Let me make the 'dough' of the country. I'll care for who make the laws."—John D. Rockefeller.

THIE, to lose one's.—"To be mentally unbalanced or incapacitated. (The figure is taken from "baking.") Syn., "to go crazy."

"It seems to me that every lawyer I employ 'loses his tire.'"—Hetty Green.

SIGHT, out of.—Superlatively excellent. Syn., "very superior," "way up." (Perhaps a corruption of the German ausgezeichnet. If anybody should ask you my opinion of myself, either as a gentleman, an actor or a fighter, you may say for me that I am "out of sight.")—John L. Sullivan in "What I Know About Clumps and Clumps."

PEACIL—Something very estimable and desirable. A laudatory expression that applies with equal force to anything, from a base-ball player to a possible presidential candidate. Syn., "lally-cooler," "bird," "daisy," "coka." "There is only one 'peach' in America, and I am it."—From "Harmony or Homily?" by an anonymous author. (N. Y., 1885.)

TIN, to put in.—To resign or throw up a position that one cannot hold with safety or dignity. "It will be a great relief to the country to know that Olney has put in his tin."—A. N. Tinsul.

JOLT, short-arm.—A surprise, or shock, usually of an unpleasant nature. (The figure is taken from the prize-ring.) "Justice is one thing for the cultured another for the poor. My sentence was a 'short-arm jolt.'"—Edgar, a prisoner.

RABS, his.—A term applied either as a mark of respect or dislaute. When used in the former sense, generally not in the presence of the "person designated. Syn., "jig-step," "trolley," "nibs," "nibs." "Say what you will, his 'rabs' is an 'easy boss.'"—Lexow in "Short Stories on Great Subjects."

WELL MUSCLED "ROUND THE MOUTH"—Eloquent, forcible in argument. "I am Sir Oracle, and when I feel confident that even if I am not a well muscled 'round the mouth,' I am always right."—G. Cleveland. (Who else would dare make the statement.)

FINGET, to give the.—To request that a bill be charged. Syn., "to hang up," "to put on the slate." "He has lived in many lands, and know many men, but I have never yet had occasion 'to give the finger.'"—Thomas Ochiltree in "L'Art de Vivre."

GLAD HAND, to give the.—To greet favorably, with the expectation of receiving favors, either business, monetary or hospitable. "I gave my reformer the 'glad hand,' and all I got was the 'marble heart.'"—Ollie Teal, Mr. Whisker. (See MARBLE HEART.)

HEART, Marble.—A refusal to aid one's fellow-man.

SEWER, Corner.—One of the pockets of a pool table. "Watch me drive the 'John Kelly' ball into the 'sewer.'"—Sidney Drew. (See JOHN KELLY.)

KELLY, JOHN.—In pool, the green ball.

STRING, to.—To trifle with the truth in such a way as to deceive. Also to make game of. Syn., "to jolly," "to guy." (Old English and straight American, to lie.) "He strings me to the top of my bent."—"The New Woman's Hamlet," edited by Elizabeth Cady Stanton.

The New Illuminant.

Carbide of calcium, as known to science, was a chemical curiosity until Mr. Wilson happened upon a way of preparing it in bulk in the course of his experiments upon the manufacture of calcium alloys by the agency of his electrical furnace. But this discovery put a new face upon the compound. When an article that has only existed in grains comes to be turned out by the ton, it is, in all intents and purposes, a new article. In this sense, carbide of calcium is very new indeed, and its industrial possibilities are newer still, inasmuch as only the most direct and obvious of these developments have as yet been so much as hinted at.

Take it that the material can be produced by the ton, and it is impossible to surmise what chemical industry will be able in the fullness of time to make of it. The product of fusing, together, in an electrical furnace, such common materials as lime and carbon in any suitable form was exhibited by Professor Lewes in a lecture recently delivered in London as a greenish-gray, stone-like substance greatly resembling the commonest description of serpentine rock. When kept in the air, a light coating of lime soon forms on its surface. Upon handling it, a faint, unpleasant odor, suggested garlic, and also not altogether unlike the familiar reek that emanates from the iron work of an old gas purifier, manifests itself. To all appearance, it is a dull, inert stone, devoid of any other properties than those of common road metal, and not more likely to be credited by the casual observer with gas-yielding capabilities. Upon a piece of this material Professor Lewes sprinkled a few drops of water from a wash bottle and put a lighted taper to it. The nascent gas—acetylene—immediately ignited with more than the brilliancy of the pitey flame of highly bluish-brown coal in an open fire, and continued to burn furiously over the wetted surface until all the water was gone. Then came the display of the same gas evolved in a jar (standing upon the lecture table) which contained pieces of the carbide in water and stood in making itself glass-bell-like. It was a dramatic exhibition of Professor Lewes's little plot when he applied a light first to a single open flame burner, and then to a group of similar burners, and people saw for the first time in a public place the intensely brilliant, white and blue-looking flame of burning pure acetylene.

It is indeed a flame to wonder at. Nothing like it ever before came within the ken of a gas manager or a chemist, and it is a phenomenon that dazed the vision of a photographer. There is something startling in the suggestion that gas of two hundred and forty candle power—calculated, in accordance with photometrical practice, upon the basis of a consumption of five cubic feet per hour—can be burnt by means of an open flat flame burner. When the carbide of calcium first came into Professor Lewes's possession it had not, in fact, been done so, and in order to get a flame of acetylene at all, the American handiwork of the gas had to back upon the brutal device of diluting it with a certain proportion of air. This was to repeat the crude American way of rendering naphtha gas useable. But the dilution of acetylene's with air is even more objectionable than is the same treatment in regard to naphtha gas, inasmuch as it is more easily converted into a violent explosive mixture in burning acetylene in the pure state, in which it comes from the mixture of calcium carbide and water, has saved its prospects as an illuminant. He showed those wonderful acetylene gas flames already mentioned, each produced by burning the gas as made in the simple way described, without any adventitious mechanical or chemical aid, after the rate of a cubic foot per hour and started to yield a measured illuminating power of twenty-five candles. This could easily be credited. But what it is more difficult to convey in mere words is the impression of steadiness, whiteness, and so to speak, softness which the flames in question made on the observer. At a little distance no non-luminous zone could be perceived but, on a close inspection, a tiny speck of blue over the top of the burner was visible. No such zone was seen in these flames, which, although exhibiting in their colors the evidence of intensely active combustion, were found to be much cooler than oil gas or alcohol-carbon gas flames of the same size. This is a most striking feature of free-burning acetylene. The incandescent electric lamps, of normal brilliancy, by which the lecture theater was lit, were made to look as dim as "red" candles by the virtue of the irradiation produced by the acetylene white flame, appeared to form a sort of almost blinding light when viewed directly in face or sideways of the flame. The mantle of the incandescent gas light is no whiter than it is so white as the naked acetylene flame, which does not flicker or change color; but in the absence of means of making a direct comparison between the two lights, it is rash to say which would bear the palm for purity of tint.—Review of Reviews.

THE ADVOCATE.

Wanted, a New Diet.

If you eat lemons says a high authority on dietetics, you will prolong your life. If your tastes lead you to the tomato, another authority remarks, you will surely die young. Beware of it, for the insidious cancer lurks in every oval. And now the learned savants tell us that even in the succulent and delicious oyster, grim death lies concealed. That bi-valve after all these years, has been found by science to be infested with the deadly typhoid bacilli, which lives and thrives inside the shell. How we have managed to live so long and eat so many oysters must remain matters of startling surprise. In doing so, we have unconsciously impeded the work of the investigator, and seriously trifled with one whose beautiful experiments in bacteriology are at once the joy and delight of the world. Accounts of them are published now, so that all may read, heed and profit. It has long been known that appendicitis, one of the most aristocratic and fashionable complications of the period, may be pushed to unpleasant extremities by indulgence in the juicy raspberry unrelieved of its cluster of chronic seeds. Life has been made a burden to some because the caterer of our animal wants occasionally mistake the wild toothroot for the tender and nutritious mushroom. But even mushrooms have slain their thousands, for are they not members of the fungus family? and we all know what an over-dose of fungi will do for us, unless the physician is on hand. It was just "was" inordinately fond," which did for an English King and what the lamprey accomplished with ease so long ago, he is fit to do again in this age of high living. Beans will produce their bad spells upon frames too weak to resist their seductive encroachments, and peas, whether split or whole, yellow or green, will provoke cautious consequences. The claims the prawn, and the lobster vie with one another in tormenting the human man, so to speak, and the shrimp inspires visions that are hideous. No one can forget that that amiable and foolish bird, the partridge, is often loaded with a bane which creates distress; and there is no being in Gilead which can soothe the hungry mortal who, sooner or later, meets his fate in the canned meats and fruits to which his more or less depraved taste has led him. Too much meat says one, makes men vicious and cross. Tripe and onions produce in some the bovine quality; and though the sausage possesses a distinct charm of its own, it has the power to hugedisturbance in otherwise happy homes. "Tra-tin brother, the humor producingologna, may be eaten cold without harm; but impromptu makes him restless, and gives one that tired feeling. Pork, though one might preserve a yardful of m-dy as a safeguard, suggests trichinosis and the trick of Cries. The haggis is shrouded in mystery, but, fortunately, we are condemned to make a dash at it only once only a year. Fish will puritate the blood. Even with the age of the tribe, salmon, we are ever quite safe. The eruptive qualities of the rash oatmeal are too familiar to be questioned.

What are we to eat, what are we to forego? Vegetables have their devotees; but in the potato there is glutin; in the fiery horse radish are the seeds of indigestion and indigestion; in the cabbage or the cauliflower there is often agony. Insect life dwells complacently in the golden poplin, and prodigates in the north of sp. A new diet, surely, is needed. If we must keep pace with the progress of science and the results of the investigations of the doctors. The old foods must go. They have killed too many. An appeal to the Grand Diet of Worms might be made for succor, but we do not know that even the worm will turn?—Atlantic.

An electrician in New Jersey claims to have discovered the secret of the fire, and ex-proposed light without heat. He uses the little insect referred to. He has followed a new principle in electricity, and claims to be able to separate the divisions of electrical energy and employ only the illuminating elements. To be able to produce light without heat is a long advance in electrical discovery, and if the inventor can make good his claims a revolution in lighting is at hand. There is actually no limit to the possibilities of electrical discovery.—run item.

GLASS PAPER.

That Would be a More Accurate Designation Nowadays Than Sandpaper.

Sandpaper as now made is false to its name, for it has no sand about it, the place of that material being now taken unusually by powdered glass, which does its work with vastly greater effect, says the Philadelphia Equiveler.

One of the most important operations in the fabrication of sandpaper is the pulverization of the glass into powder of the different grades of fineness. Commonly an iron mortar is used for this purpose, a heavy trouse being the crushing instrument. Stamping machinery is better. It consists of a stout box, whose iron side walls serve as a base for the stamping machinery. In the box which may be closed by a wooden door to prevent waste of material and also injury to the workman, are two iron cylinders in which play the stamps. These crush the glass, turning on their axes as they work.

For grading the powder several shifting cylinders are necessary, covered with gauze of different mesh. Beginning with the coarsest the material proceeds gradually to the finest, ending each time that which passes through the network.

The paper to be used in the manufacture must be good, strong and rather long-fibered; it must also be free from knots and irregularities, and if there be any such they must be planned off. If they should be overlooked, they would interfere with the proper use of the sandpaper; the knots would protrude through the glue, and little edges and channels would result, making it impossible to smooth off surface evenly with the paper.

The paper is cut into two large sheets, spread on work tables, fastened down, and then paluted by means of a large brush, with a thin, even coat of hot glue. If the glue is too thin and the paper of bad quality, the glue soaks into the paper, so that which remains is not of sufficient consistency to hold the glass. This results a sandpaper from which the glass easily rubs off, or which in places has no glass at all, or not enough. This is notably the case with the coarser varieties, in which the layer of glue must be put on with exceeding care that the relatively large fragments of glass which can in no manner be soaked with the binding material, may be held fast in it. On the other hand, if the layer of glue is too thick or the consistency too viscous, the outer part hardens too quickly, so that the glass powder cannot embed itself in it.

When the glue has been spread on the paper the powdered glass must be sifted on through an appropriate sieve. This operation also requires considerable skill, though not so much as the spreading of the glue. For the glass must not be sifted merely in such a manner as to give a given quantity to a sheet, but so that each sheet may be covered evenly. Even then all the powder will not stick, and some of the particles lie upon others without touching the glue; these can be shaken off by a slight movement of the paper. When the superfluous glass powder has been removed a wooden roller is passed lightly over the paper to press the particles of glass as firmly as possible into the glue and to form a perfectly even surface.

The First Step.

Perhaps you are run down, can't eat, can't sleep, can't think, can't do anything to your satisfaction, and you wonder what ails you. You should heed the warning, you are taking the first step into Nervous Prostration. You need a Nerve Tonic and in Electric Bitters you will find the exact remedy for restoring your nervous system to its normal, healthy condition. Surprising results follow the use of this great Nerve Tonic and Alternative. Your appetite returns, good digestion is restored, and the Kidneys and Liver resume healthy action. Try a bottle. For Contempt of Court.

Opposite the stage station and hotel was a shanty with a sign of "Jail" over the door, and I strolled over there and saked off a man sitting at the door smoking a pipe?

"Can I take it that this is the county jail?"
"You kin, sir," he promptly replied.
"Not much of a jail."
"No, sir; but it's a new county, you know."

"Any prisoners inside."
"No, sir; I'm the only prisoner, and they allow me outside."
Where is the Sheriff or Jailer?
"Gone off hunting."
"And left you all alone?"
"All alone. I'm purty comfortable however, and my time will be out in about six months."

"But I should think you'd run away," I said, as I offered him a cigar.
"Whear too?" he queried in reply.
"If I go to Grass Valley the boys will hang me for boss stealin'. If I go to Dilige City they'll hang me for stealin' a newel. Over to Euchre Den they want me to pull hemp for robbin' Bill White. I might git up into the mouchar, but the darned 'tjonus would try for my scalp. The safest place for me is right here, and I shan't be put on with exceeding care that the relatively large fragments of glass which can in no manner be soaked with the binding material, may be held fast in it. On the other hand, if the layer of glue is too thick or the consistency too viscous, the outer part hardens too quickly, so that the glass powder cannot embed itself in it.

"My friend, would it hurt your feelings if I should ask you why you were sent here?"
"Not a bit sir, I killed a man."
"You did, eh? But now—how—"
"How did it happen? I was sent to jail for a y'a' instead of being hung?"
"Yes."
Oh, they didn't keep anything about the killing, and give me two bull months to walk off in. As I wouldn't go, the Judge he said it was contempt of court, and sent me up here for a y'a', so he could hear the use of my cause and guess free grants. Don't happen to have a new deck of keards with you, eh?"
"Sorry to say I haven't."
"I was in hopes you had. The Judge will be up this way to-morrow, and I'd have the keards all fixed and play him the best three out of five to see whether I drawed pay as jailer or scrubbed along as prisoner."—St. Louis Republic.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

For Railroad Commissioner.

We are authorized to announce John C. Wool as a candidate for Railroad Commissioner, for the Eastern District of Kentucky, subject to the action of the Republican party.

For Representative.

We are authorized to announce Mr. W. F. Horton as a candidate to represent the counties of Montgomery and Menfroe in the Lower House of the General Assembly of Kentucky, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

For Superintendent of Public Instruction.

I am candidate for the nomination for Superintendent of Public Instruction, subject to the action of the Democratic Convention.

C. W. FOWLER.

The Precinct Convention.

At the precinct conventions on Saturday, delegates were elected to the County Convention that will meet Tuesday.

The following precincts sent delegates instructed for Major C. W. Fowler for Superintendent of Public Instruction, and favorable to Gen. Hardin for Governor:

MT. STERLING.

First Ward 3 votes
Second Ward 3 "
Third Ward 1 "
Fourth Ward 2 "

COUNTY.

Aaron's Run 3 votes
Grassy Lick 3 "
Spencer 1 "
Howard's Mill 3 "

Total 23 votes

The following precincts instructed for Mr. Clay and Major C. W. Fowler:

COUNTY.

Jeffersonville 3 "
Levee 2 "
Bean's 1 "

Total 6 votes

This, of course, gave the vote of the county to Major Fowler, handicapped by instructions for no one else.

The convention to nominate a Democratic candidate for the Legislative District composed of Montgomery and Menfroe counties, meets at the Court House in Mt. Sterling to-day.

Some of the Clay men are awfully dry. They think the refreshing drink was passed to the Hardin folks, and that was what was the matter with the A.

County Convention.

The meeting of the delegates selected by the County Precinct Conventions held on Saturday, June 15, 1895, to select delegates to attend the State Convention to be held at Louisville June 25, was called to order at 2 o'clock p. m. yesterday by County Chairman, H. R. French. W. A. De Haven was elected Chairman and J. D. Tipton Secretary. All the precincts were represented.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That we commend to the representatives of the party, who will assemble in Louisville on June 25th, our fellow-citizen, Major C. W. Fowler, as an enthusiastic candidate for the office of Superintendent of Public Instruction. We heartily endorse him as a gentleman of high character and intelligence, and thoroughly qualified by talent and experience to discharge the duties of that important office; sober, industrious, zealous and conscientious, who is worthy of the support which should be accorded by his party to a faithful Democrat and a capable and honest man.

Resolved, That Judge H. R. French, W. F. Horton, A. R. Ratliff, R. C. Gatewood, W. S. Lloyd, L. C. Rickell, Albert Bonney, A. J. Owings, I. Davis, Sevel, J. L. White, C. D. Grubbs, N. H. Trimble, N. Fowler as a candidate for Superintendent of Public Instruction before said Convention so long as his name may be before said body, and to use all honorable means to secure his nomination, and upon all other questions pending before said Convention and for all other candidates before said Convention they are instructed to cast the vote of this county as a majority of those present in person at said Convention may direct.

W. A. DeHaven, Chm'n.
J. D. Tipton, Sec'y.

NOTE--The meeting by a vote of 26 to 3 determined not to consider the financial question.

The precinct conventions in this county on last Saturday to select delegates to the county convention which met at the Court House Monday, were orderly. Democrats met and acted according to majority without any squabbling. The instructions were for Major C. W. Fowler and there they voted, except in three precincts, where they added the name of Cassius M. Clay, Jr., for Governor. The vote standing in the county against any instructions except Major Fowler, 23 to 6.

The meetings were harmonious. Everybody satisfied and ready to support the nominees whomsoever they may be. They were old-line Democratic meetings, and were a forecast of the harmony that will prevail next November.

Another Shooting.

Last night Jo Martin, a bad young man, was drunk in Ed Bramlett's saloon on South Haystack street, and becoming angry at Newton Ratliff, struck him over the head with a heavy cane, laying open his scalp. Chief of Police, C. T. Wilson, had been called into the saloon by the proprietor to quiet some parties in it, and started to arrest Martin who ran for some distance up the railroad toward his home. While resisting arrest Wilson shot him in the leg inflicting a flesh wound. These are all the particulars we are able to gather.

A SPECIAL TERM.

Judge Cooper Orders a Special Term of Court

For June 28, to Try Johnson and Whitaker.

Judge Cooper has called a special term of the Circuit Court to convene June 28, for the purpose of trying Johnson and Henry Whitaker, in jail under charge of wilful murder. Yesterday he made the following orders:

"In appearing to the satisfaction of the court, that John Johnson (of color) and James Whitaker are each now confined in the Montgomery County Jail charged with the crime of wilful murder, and which is alleged to have been committed in Montgomery County since the last term of this court, notice is hereby given, that there will be a special term of the Montgomery Circuit Court commenced on the 28th day of June, 1895, for the purpose of trying and finally disposing of said cases and to hear any motion or enter any order, or render any judgment that may be necessary in either of said cases, and said special term will continue ten judicial days, if necessary to dispose of said cases.

Given under my hand as the Judge of the Montgomery Circuit Court, this June 17th, 1895.

J. E. COOPER
Circuit Judge of the 21st Judicial District of Kentucky."

"The Commonwealth of Kentucky, Plaintiff, vs. John Johnson (of color), Defendant, and the Commonwealth of Kentucky, Plaintiff, vs. James, alias Henry Whitaker, Defendant:

"It appearing to the satisfaction of the court that an emergency exists and that it is necessary to hold a special term of the Montgomery Circuit Court to try and dispose of the above styled cases, said defendants being confined in the Montgomery County Jail charged with the crime of wilful murder, and alleged to have been committed in Montgomery County since the last term of the Montgomery Circuit Court.

"It is therefore ordered that a special term of the Montgomery Circuit Court be commenced on the 28th day of June, 1895, and continued for a period of ten judicial days if it is necessary to try and dispose of the said above styled prosecutions, and the Sheriff of Montgomery County is ordered and directed to summon thirty (30) sensible, sober, discreet citizens and housekeepers of the County of Montgomery as petit jurors, and twenty (20) sober, sensible, discreet citizens and housekeepers of Montgomery County as grand jurors for said special term, and each juror to be a man of fair character, approved integrity, sound judgement and well informed; and said Sheriff is ordered and directed to summon said jurors without regard to race, color or previous condition of servitude.

"The Clerk of the Montgomery Circuit Court is ordered to file their order and enter it on the minute book of the orders of the Montgomery Circuit Court, and preserve the same in his office.

"Given under my hand, this, 17th day of June, 1895.

J. E. COOPER,
Circuit Judge.

HEART DISEASE!

Fluttering, No Appetite, Could Not Sleep, Wind on Stomach.

"For a long time I had a terrible pain at my heart, which fluttered about incessantly. I had no appetite and could not sleep. I would be compelled to sit up in bed and beat gas from my stomach until I thought that every minute would be my last. There was a feeling of oppression about my heart, and I was afraid to draw a full breath. I could not sweep a room without resting. My husband induced me to try Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and am happy to say it has cured me. I now have a splendid appetite and sleep well. Its effect was truly marvelous."

Gave New Life

Sick Headache and Neuralgia Cured by Hood's.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla has done me a great deal of good. I have been a sufferer from sick headache and neuralgia nearly all my life. The pains had become so intense that my hands would cramp for hours so that I could not use them. The doctor told my husband there was little help for me. The different medicines tried had greatly distressed me. Since using two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla I have rested, and, so much so that I feel like a new person. Our little boy has been troubled with his throat but since taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, soreness and hoarseness have gone and he is better in health. Mrs. MARTIN GIBSON, Dukedom, Tennessee. Died, on the 7th day of June, 1895, Barbara Ann Reid, in her 75th year.

She was the daughter of Joseph and Sibley Reid, respected citizens of our county, and she lived with her parents until her death, after which she moved to Harrison county, Ky., and made her home with her brother, Joseph Reid.

She leaves two brothers, William Turner Reid, of this county, and Joseph Reid, of Harrison county, Ky. A year or two since Mrs. Mary D. Reid went to visit her in the Eagle Hills of Harrison county where she lived. She found her the same cheerful, bright companion she had known in other days. Mother Reid looks back to that visit to the good woman with a keen pleasure that marks it one of the green spots in her later days. The deceased was a good woman, gentle in disposition, quiet and retiring in her manners, moving along in the evenness of her life, exhibiting by her daily walk and conversation all the virtues of a conscientious Christian woman. She had many friends, but no enemies. The rivalries of life found no place in her heart, and she threw over the faults of others the mantle of Christian charity. She became a member of the old Baptist church at Lexington at 14 years of age and lived a consistent member of the same until her death, dying in the full triumph of faith. She knew in whom she had believed, and that there was reserved for her a better and brighter home than this. Passed to her ashes. J. D. R.
